KALAMAZOO, MI -- Kalamazoo-based Keystone Solutions Group is doubling in size thanks to demand from the medical device industry, the company announced today.

Keystone's manufacturing subsidiary will occupy 9,000 square feet in Grand Rapids for new offices, warehouse and manufacturing space, and clean-room facilities, it said in a written statement.

"With a new location in Grand Rapids, in addition to our facility in Kalamazoo, Keystone is better positioned to continue growing in the burgeoning medical device industry," Jim Medsker, principal of Keystone Solutions Group, said in the statement.

The company, which in July changed its name to Keystone from Alliant Engineering, performs manufacturing, assembly, packing and distribution of medical devices and supplies. It also serves the automotive and aerospace industries.
